

Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking Statement

Introduction

Korus Health Ltd is committed to preventing modern slavery and human trafficking in our operations and supply chains. As a public health organization, we recognize the importance of ethical practices and accountability to uphold human rights.

Company Structure and Supply Chains

Our structure includes a board of directors and a management team, with operations in the public health sector. We engage suppliers for IT services, technical equipment, and consumable goods, working exclusively with UK-based suppliers to minimize modern slavery risks.

Policies in Support of Anti-Slavery Commitments

We uphold policies that align with our commitment to combat modern slavery:

- Safeguarding Policy: Protects vulnerable individuals, reinforcing our zero tolerance for exploitation.
- Conflict of Interest Policy: Ensures transparency in decision-making and upholds ethical standards.
- Human Rights Policy: Reflects our dedication to promoting human rights and preventing forced labour.
- Acceptable Use of ICT Policy: Promotes responsible technology use, supporting secure digital practices across our supply chain.

Risk Assessment and Due Diligence

Although our supply chain risk is low, we regularly review our suppliers' modern slavery statements and maintain close oversight of UK-based companies. This ensures our partners comply with anti-slavery standards.

Training and Awareness

We provide comprehensive staff training, including:

Conflict Resolution,

Equality and Diversity,

Safeguarding Adults and Children, promoting awareness and ethical conduct.

Data security and the Acceptable Use of ICT training reinforce responsible practices, particularly within digital supply chains.

Ongoing Efforts and Accountability

We continue to monitor modern slavery risks, seeking to improve oversight where necessary and maintain compliance with UK regulations. This statement reflects our ongoing commitment to ethical practices and human rights.
